

Everyone and everything deserves to live.

Take a second, close your eyes, and try and remember some of the happiest times in your life, like finding the love of your life, or accomplishing great achievements like getting a degree. Maybe even try remembering the simple moments, like enjoying food with your loved ones, or even just petting a dog. Now take all of these happy moments, all of your hopes, dreams, every memorable moment that you have experienced, and imagine... None of it happened. In fact, imagine your entire life, everything, all of your feelings and thoughts, never happened. This is the reality of abortion. People that don't get to experience their life. I am pro-life because everyone deserves life. I want to talk about just that, along with how everyone has potential, and how everyone is unique and exists for a reason.

One of the most important things that people should have a chance at is to fill out their life, And the most unfair thing you can do to a person is to kill them against their will. "Any country that accepts abortion is not teaching its people to love, but to use violence to get what they want," as St. Mother Teresa once said. Everyone has a life to fill out, and not only is it unfair to kill them, but it is not a humane solution to having a baby you cannot take care of. There is always adoption, and attack on life is an offense against God.

Abortion is a very sad topic, but what makes it the most sad is that not only is it killing a baby, but it is killing a baby along with their potential. Each person on Earth has potential for something because God made them. Imagine also the memories somebody could have with that child, because children bring joy. I am the youngest in a family of seven sisters, and yes, that may sound chaotic, but I honestly could not imagine our family without any of them. I am grateful that my mom made the decision to give life to all of us, because I'm sure there might have been people telling her otherwise.

My last but definitely not least argument, is everyone is unique. "You are the salt of the earth, and are the light of the world" (Matthew 5:13-14). It could not be more true. If a baby is killed, there most likely will never be another person like them, or another person with a life that is close to theirs. Everyone is priceless because everyone is a one-of-a-kind creation by God with each a different role in the world, and by killing children that are in the womb, that unique personality and traits the baby has is gone forever.

I am pro-life because everyone deserves life. Along with how everyone has potential and unique traits. I hope this made you realize the reality of abortion, and how it is destroying the potential experiences and happiness they could have in their life.
